

Klee at the Met

Klee at the Tate

Klee at MoMA

Klee at SFMOMA

Zentrum Paul Klee

Klee, 1927
Photograph: Hugo Erfurth

The Guggenheim museum hosted Paul Klee 1879-1940: A Retrospective Exhibition in 1967. Read about the catalogue produced for the exhibition on the museum's website.

Look through the checklist of works included in a Klee solo exhibition at Harvard Art Museums in 1993.

The EY Exhibition: Paul Klee – Making Visible was on display at the Tate Modern in 2013. The exhibition brought together works from around the world “displayed alongside each other as the artist originally intended, often for the first time since Klee exhibited them himself.” Read some in-depth reviews in The Guardian and the Evening Standard, and an interview with the curator of the exhibition in TimeOut.

Moeller Fine Art included 35 works in the 2013 exhibition Paul Klee: Early and Late Years, 1894-1940.

The retrospective Paul Klee: Irony at Work was at the Centre Pompidou in 2016. Read a review in Hyperallergic, “The Tender Playfulness of Paul Klee”

Ten Americans: After Paul Klee was installed at the Phillips Collection in 2018, showing Klee's influence on the development of mid-20th century American Art and featuring more than 60 works from the US and Switzerland. Read a review in the Washington Post.

The National Gallery of Canada traveled Paul Klee: The Berggruen Klee Collection in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in 2018. This collection is the largest of Klee's work in the United States, and has been featured in Met exhibitions including Humor and Fantasy – The Berggruen Paul Klee Collection.

In 2019, Paul Klee: 1939 opened at David Zwirner Gallery, focusing solely on the artist's work made in the year before his death. It was also the first exhibition of Klee's work in the gallery after it announced an exclusive collaboration with the Klee family. Read a review in Hyperallergic, “Paul Klee, When the World Went Dark.”

Paul Klee, Between Two Worlds was at Lille Métropole Musée d'art modern, de'art contemporain et d'art brut in 2021-2022, exploring how children's art, prehistoric art, and what Klee understood as “the art of the insane” helped the artist think through his work in light of the trauma of World War I. Read a review of the exhibition in Culturez-vous.

In 2022-2023, Paul Klee and the Secrets of Nature was at the Fundació Joan Miró. The same year, Zentrum Paul Klee installed the exhibition Paul Klee: About Technical Frenzy revealing “Paul Klee's artistic engagement with the technical achievements of his time.” Read a review in ArtDaily.

Klee in his studio, 1939
Photograph: Aufnahme Fotopress

Paul Klee (Swiss-German, 1879-1940)
Das Gelbe Haus (The Yellow House), 1914
Watercolor on paper mounted on cardboard

Private Collection; L2023:74.5

Paul Klee was a talented violinist as a child, but turned to visual art at nineteen when he enrolled in the Academy of Fine Arts in Munich. The artist struggled with his approach to color until the early 20th century, when he began to develop his own color theories in response to Cubism and Wassily Kandinsky's (1866-1944) modern abstraction. Das Gelbe Haus (The Yellow House) was painted after Klee took a trip to Tunisia, where the light quality led to a breakthrough in his approach. After the trip, the artist wrote: "Color possesses me. I don't have to pursue it. It will possess me always, I know it. That is the meaning of this happy hour: Color and I are one. I am a painter."

On view August 9 – November 19, 2023