In 2009, the Museo Picasso Málaga installed Sophie Taeuber-Arp: Avant-garde Pathways, her first retrospective in Spain. Watch a promo video of the exhibition by VernissageTV.

Sophie Taeuber-Arp: Today is Tomorrow was presented as a collaboration between the Kunsthalle Bielefeld and the Aargauer Kunsthaus. The traveling exhibition included 300 of the artist’s works, from design, painting, and textiles to drawing, sculpture, dance, and scenography.

The ZAMEK Culture Centre in Poznań, Poland installed Breaking into a New Dimension: The Artist Sophie Taeuber-Arp in 2019.

The gallery Hauser & Wirth represents the Taeuber-Arp’s estate. In 2020, it presented an online exhibition of her work. “Challenging conventional boundaries, Sophie Taeuber-Arp asserted art’s relevance to daily life, working across disciplines, from works on paper, painting, textiles, and sculpture, to design and architecture, as well as performance.”

In 2021, Sophie Taeuber-Arp: Living Abstraction was co-organized by the Kunstmuseum Basel, the Tate Modern, and the Museum of Modern Art. The exhibition was a major retrospective of her work, including over 400 pieces. Read reviews of the New York edition in the New York Times, Brooklyn Rail, and Art in America. The Tate published an article, “Five Things to Know about Sophie Taeuber-Arp” for its installation. Take a tour of the Basel edition with curator Eva Reifert.

Read an article in Hyperallergic, “The Patrons Who Sustained Sophie Taeuber-Arp,” that includes a discussion of letters exchanged between the artist and her patroness, Annie Müller-Widmann.

Taeuber-Arp was a co-signer of the Zurich Dada Manifesto in 1916: “Dada is a new tendency in art. One can tell this from the fact that until now nobody knew anything about it, and tomorrow everyone in Zurich will be talking about it. Dada comes from the dictionary. It is terribly simple. In French it means ‘hobby horse.’ In German it means ‘good-by,’ ‘Get off my back,’ ‘Be seeing you sometime.’ In Romanian: ‘Yes, indeed, you are right, that’s it. But of course, yes, definitely, right.’ And so forth.”
Sophie Taeuber-Arp (Swiss, 1889-1943)

Six espaces aux teintes ensoleillées (Six Surfaces with Sunlit Hues), 1938
Oil on canvas

Private Collection; L2023:1.4

Sophie Taeuber-Arp was an active member of the Zurich Dada movement during World War I and continued to make major contributions to Concrete Art and Constructivism throughout the 20th century. Despite this widespread impact, the artist’s paintings, sculptures, textiles, design, and dance compositions were largely unrecognized until long after her death. Six espaces aux teintes ensoleillées (Six Surfaces with Sunlit Hues) is one of Tauber-Arp’s geometrically abstract paintings. In the 1930s, the artist produced many four-space, six-space, and twelve-space paintings that were influenced by her style of textile design. The artist often worked across media, intertwining various aspects of her widespread practice. As she once said: “The intrinsic decorative urge should not be eradicated. It is one of humankind’s deep-rooted, primordial urges.”

On view April 12 – July 16, 2023
Sophie Taeuber-Arp (Swiss, 1889-1943)

Composition schématique Aubette, 1926
Relief, oil on board on wood

Private Collection; L2022:75.3

Born and raised in the Alpine town of Davos, Sophie Taeuber-Arp attended art schools in Germany before returning to her native Switzerland during World War I. Though she has been woefully overlooked and overshadowed by her male counterparts in modern art history, Taeuber-Arp made major contributions to Concrete Art, Constructivism, and Dada in the 20th century. Her wide practice spans painting, sculpture, textiles, design, and dance, with an emphasis on geometric abstraction. Composition schématique Aubette is one of the artist’s designs for the Aubette, an entertainment venue in Strasbourg for which she was commissioned to create an avant-garde interior design in 1926. Though the Aubette was largely destroyed during the German occupations of France in World War II, many rooms have been restored and the venue is now a historic monument of modern interior design.

On view October 26, 2022 – January 29, 2023